

ARCAD3

Pow3r

Pow3r designed a new Arcad3 ottoman for Driade, a celebration of gaming and its evolution from arcades to the home. “Push the button,” sang a famous Chemical Brothers track. Today, the buttons are no longer those of the famous “room,” but those of gamers who, from their rooms, are bringing the world closer to a future balanced between real and virtual. The object that Power designed for Driade celebrates the very first arcade buttons from the 1980s, transforming the old vintage buttons into a collection of storage seats. “Since I was a child, I’ve always been passionate about architecture and design, from objects to large-scale projects. Now, after university, I’ve had the opportunity to create a piece of my own, and not for just any brand, but for Driade. Being able to incorporate pop culture and gaming into a large project of which I am a part is the culmination of my dream, of a career, but above all, it’s a thank you to the world of gaming.” Pow3r
